

SUMMARY STATISTICS

QUESTION(S) POSED:

Were Year 4 - Total Revenue yields for the Consumer Discretionary sector similar or different compared to the Healthcare sector?

Also, was there an increase or decline in Revenue Growth from Year 3 -to- Year 4 for either of the two sectors?

RESULT:

The average Total Revenue for companies within the Consumer Discretionary sector was a little over $20b and $27.3b for companies within the Healthcare sector.

The median Total Revenue for companies within the Consumer Discretionary sector is $10.1b and $10.6b for companies in the Healthcare sector.

The range for gross profit in Healthcare sector (at about $190b) is greater than in the Consumer Discretionary sector (at about $165b) suggesting that gross profit in Healthcare sector has greater volatility than Consumer Discretionary sector.

The standard deviation of Total Revenue for companies within the Consumer Discretionary sector is $30.9b and $45b for Healthcare companies.

As for revenue growth from Year 3 to Year 4; Consumer Discretionary companies accrued $1,433,673,899,000 in Total Revenue for Year 3, and $1,523,851,904,000 for Year 4, resulting a 0.06% gain.

Companies in the Healthcare sector accrued $1,171,182,213,000 in Total Revenue for Year 3, and $1,283,674,608,000 for Year 4, resulting in a 0.10% gain.